

HUM

Now we have shewn out power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done,
Than when it was a doing. Shakep. Coriolanus.
Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And faithful service, 'till the point of death. Shak. H. VI.
We should be as humble in our imperfections and sins as Christ was in the fulness of the spirit, great wisdom, and perfect life. Taylor's Rule of living holy.
Chuse you for me; for well you understand
But if an humble husband may request,
Provide and order all things for the best. Dryden.
Ten thousand trifles light as these,
Nor can my rage nor anger move;
She should be humble, who would please;
And the must suffer, who can love. Prior.
2. Low; not high; not great.
Th' example of the heav'nly lark,
Thy fellow-poet, Cowley mark!
Above the skies let thy proud music found,
Thy humble nest build on the ground. Cowley.
Denied what ev'ry wretch obtains of fate,
An humble roof and an obscure retreat. Yalden.
Ah! prince, hadst thou but known the joys which dwell
With humbler fortunes, thou wouldst curse thy royalty. Rowe.
Far humbler titles suit my lost condition. Smith.
To HUMBLE. v. a. [from the adjective.]
1. To make humble; to make submissive; to make to bow down with humility.
Take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues
Have humbled to all strokes. Shakep. King Lear.
The executioner
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But first begs pardon. Shakep. As you like it.
Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you. 1 Pet. v. 6.
Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart. 2 Chro.
Why do I humble thus myself, and suing
For peace, reap nothing but repulse and hate. Milton.
Let the sinner put away the evil of his doings, and humble himself by a speedy and sincere repentance: let him return to God, and then let him be assured that God will return to him. Rogers's Sermons.
2. To crush; to break; to subdue; to mortify.
Yearly injoin'd, some say, to undergo
This annual humbling certain number'd days,
To dash their pride, and joy, for man seduc'd. Milt. P. L.
We are pleas'd, by some implicit kind of revenge, to see him taken down and humbled in his reputation, who had so far rais'd himself above us. Addison's Spectat.
The mistress of the world, the seat of empire,
The nurse of heroes, the delight of gods,
That humbled the proud tyrants of the earth. Addis. Cato.
Men that make a kind of insult upon society, ought to be humbled as disturbers of the publick tranquillity. Freeholder.
Fortune not much of humbling me can boast;
Though double tax'd, how little have I lost!
3. To make to confound.
This would not be to confound to their capacities, when he humbles himself to speak to them, but to lose his design in speaking. Locke.
4. To bring down from an height.
In process of time the highest mountains may be humbled into valleys; and again, the lowest valleys exalted into mountains. Hakewill on Providence.
HUMBLEBEE. n. f. [from hum and bee.] A buzzing wild bee.
The honeybags steal from the humblebees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs. Shakespeare.
This puts us in mind once again of the humblebees and the tinderboxes. Atterbury.
HUMBLEBEE. n. f. A herb. Ainsworth.
HUMBLEBEE EATER. n. f. A fly that eats the humblebee. Ainsf.
HUMBLENESS. n. f. [from humble.] Humility; abience of pride.
With how true humbleness
They look'd down to triumph over pride! Sidney.
I am rather with all subjected humbleness to thank her excellencies, since the duty therunto gave me rather heart to fave myself, than to receive thanks for a deed which was her only inspiring. Sidney, b. i.
It was answered by us all, in all possible humbleness; but yet with a countenance, that we knew that he spoke it but merrily. Bacon's New Atlantis.
A grain of glory, mixt with humbleness,
Cures both a fever and lethargickness. Herbert.
HUMBLER. n. f. [from humble.] One that humbles or subdues himself or others.
HUMBLEMOUTHED. adj. [from humble and mouthe.] Mild; meek.
You are meek and humblemouth'd; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen and pride. Shak. H. VIII.
HUMBLEPLANT. n. f. A species of sensitiveplant.
The humbleplant is so called because, as soon as you touch it,

HUM

it prostrates itself on the ground, and in a short time elevates itself again, is rais'd in hotbeds. Mortimer's Husbandry.
HUMBLESS. n. f. Entrails of a deer.
HUMBLESS. n. f. [from humble.] Humbleness; humility.
And with meek humbleness, and afflicted mood,
Pardon for thee, and grace for me intreat. Spenser.
HUMBLV. adv. [from humble.]
1. Without pride; with humility.
They were us'd to bend,
To send their smiles before them to Achilles,
To come humbly as they us'd to creep to holy altars. Shakep.
Here the tam'd Euphrates humbly glides,
And there the Rhine submits her swelling tides. Dryden.
Write him down a slave, who, humbly proud,
With presents begs preferments from the crowd. Dryden.
In midst of dangers, fears, and death,
Thy goodness I'll adore;
And praise thee for thy mercies past,
And humbly hope for more. Addison's Spectator.
2. Without height; without elevation.
HUMDRUM. adj. [from hum, drone, or humming drone.] Dull;
dronish; stupid.
Shall we, quoth she, stand still humdrum,
And see stout Bruin all alone,
By numbers basely overthrown?
I was talking with an old humdrum fellow, and, before I had heard his story out, was called away by business. Addison.
To HUMECT. v. a. [from humectio, Latin; humectare, Fr.]
To HUMECTATE. v. a. To wet; to moisten.
The Nile and Niger do not only moisten and temperate the air by their exhalations, but refresh and humectate
the earth by their annual inundations. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
Her rivers are wheel'd up into small cataracts, and so divided into sluices, to humectate the bordering soil, and make it wonderfully productive. Huet's Vulgar Errors.
The medicaments are of a cool humecting quality, and not too much astringent. Wifeman's Surgery.
HUMECTATION. n. f. [from humectation, Fr. from humectare.] The act of wetting; moistening.
Plates of brass, applied to a blow, will keep it down from swelling: the cause is repercuSSION, without humectation, or entrance of any body. Bacon's Natural History.
That which is concreted by exiccation, or expression of humidity, will be resolved by humectation, as earth and clay.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
HUMERAL. adj. [from humeral, Fr. from humerus, Latin.] Belonging to the shoulder.
The largest crooked needle should be used, with a ligature, in taking up the humeral arteries in amputation. Sharp.
HUMICUBATION. n. f. [from hum and cubo, Latin.] The act of lying on the ground.
Fasting and sackcloth, and ashes and tears, and humiliations, used to be companions of repentance. Bramhall.
HUMID. adj. [from humide, French; humidus, Lat.] Wet; moist; watery.
Is there, with humid bow,
Waters the odorous banks that blow
Flowers of more mingl'd hue
Than her purple scarf can shew. Milton.
The queen, recover'd, rears her humid eyes,
And first her husband on the poop espies. Dryden.
If they slip easily, and are of a fit size to be agitated by heat, and the heat is big enough to keep them in agitation, the body is fluid; and if it be apt to stick to things, it is humid. Newton's Opt.
HUMIDITY. n. f. [from humiditas, Fr. from humid.] That quality which we call moisture, or the power of wetting other bodies. It differs very much from fluidity, depending altogether on the con-gruity of the component particles of any liquor to the pores or surfaces of such particular bodies as it is capable of adhering to. Thus quicksilver is not a moist liquor, in respect to our hands or clothes, and many other things it will not stick to; but it may be called so in reference to gold, tin, or lead, to whose surfaces it will presently adhere. And even water itself, that wets almost every thing, and is the great standard of humidity, is not capable of wetting every thing; for it stands and runs easily off in globular drops on the leaves of cabbages, and many other plants; and it will not wet the feathers of ducks, swans, and other water-fowl. Quincy.
We'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watry pumpion: we'll teach him to know turtles from jays. Shakespeare.
O blessing-breeding fun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity: below thy sister's orb Infect the air. Shakep. Timon of Athens.
Young animals have more tender fibres, and more humidity, than old animals, which have their juices more exalted and relifhing. Arbutnot on Diet.
HUMILIATION. n. f. [French.]
1. Defect from greatness; act of humility.
The former was an humiliation of Deity, the latter an humiliation of manhood; for which cause there followed upon the latter

HUM

latter an exaltation of that which was humbled; for with power he created the world, but restored it by obedience. Hooker, b. v. f. 55.
Thy humiliation shall exalt
With thee thy manhood also to this throne. Milt. Pa. Legl.
2. Mortification; external expression of sin and unworthiness.
John fared poorly, according unto the apparel he wore, that is, of camel's hair; and the doctrine he preached was humiliation and repentance. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
With tears
Watering the ground, and with our sighs the air
Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign
Of sorrow unfeign'd, and humiliation meek. Milt. Pa. Legl.
3. Abatement of pride.
It may serve for a great lesson of humiliation to mankind, to behold the habits and passions of men trampling over interest, friendship, honour, and their own personal safety, as well as that of their country. Swift.
HUMILITY. n. f. [from humilitas, French.]
1. Freedom from pride; modesty; not arrogance.
When we make profession of our faith, we stand; when we acknowledge our sins, or seek unto God for favour, we fall down; because the gesture of constancy becometh us best in the one, in the other the behaviour of humility. Hooker.
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night;
I thank my God for my humility. Shakep. Richard III.
What the height of a king tempteth to revenge, the humility of a Christian teacheth to forgive. King Charles.
The humility of the style gained them many friends. Clarend.
There are some that use Humility to serve their pride, and seem Humble upon their way, to be the prouder
At their wish'd journey's end. Denham's Sephy.
It is an easy matter, when there is no danger of a trial, to extol humility in the midst of honours, or to begin a fast after dinner. Squib's Sermons.
As high turrets, for their airy steep,
Require foundations in proportion deep;
And lofty cedars as far upwards shoot,
As to the nether heavens they drive the root;
So low did her secure foundation lye,
She was not humble, but humility. Dryden.
2. Act of submission.
With these humilities they satisfied the young king, and by their bowing and bending avoided the present storm. Davies.
HUMMER. n. f. [from hum.] An applauder. Ainsworth.
HUMORAL. adj. [from humour.] Proceeding from the humours.

fevers. Harvey on Consumptions.
HUMORIST. n. f. [from humorista, Italian; humoriste, French.]
HUMORIST. n. f. [from hum.] An applauder. Ainsworth.
1. One who conducts himself by his own fancy; one who gratifies his own humour.
The wit sinks imperceptibly into an humorist. Spektator.
The notion of a humorist is one that is greatly pleas'd, or greatly displeas'd, with little things; his actions seldom directed by the reason and nature of things. Watt's Logick.
This humorist keeps to himself much more than he wants, and gives a vast relief of his superfluities to purchase heaven.
Addison's Spectator.
2. One who has violent and peculiar passions.
By a wife and timous inquisition the peccant humours and humorists must be discovered and purged, or cut off: mercy, in such a case, in a king, is true cruelty. Bacon's Villiers.
HUMOROUS. adj. [from humour.]
1. Full of grotesque or odd images.
Some of the commentators tell us, that Marfya was a lawyer who had lost his cause; others that this passage alludes to the story of the satire Marfyas, who contended with Apollo, which I think is more humorous. Addison on Italy.
Thy humorous vein, thy pleasing folly,
Lies all neglected, all forgot;
And pensive, wav'ring, melancholy,
Thou dread'st and hop'st thou know'st not what. Prior.
2. Capricious; irregular; without any rule but the present whim.
I am known to be a humorous patrician; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tinder-like, upon too trivial motion. Shakep. Coriolanus.
Thou fortune's champion, that do'st never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by,
To teach thee safety.
He's humorous as Winter, and as sudden
As flaws congeal'd in the spring of day, Shakep. Hen. IV.
O, you awake then: come away,
Times be short, are made for play;
The humorous moon too will not stay;
What doth make you thus delay?
Vast is his courage, boundless is his mind,
Rough as a storm, and humorous as the wind. Ben. Johnson.
Dryden.

HUM

He that would learn to pass a just sentence on persons and things, must take heed of a fanciful temper of mind, and an humorous conduct in his affairs. Watt's Logick.
3. Pleasant; jocular.
HUMOROUSLY. adj. [from humorous.]
1. Merrily; jocosely.
A cabinet of medals Juvenal calls, very humorously, con-cium argentum in titulos facie que minuat. Addison on Medals.
We resolve by halves, and unadvisedly; we resolve rashly, fillily, or humorously, upon no reasons that will hold. Calamy.
It has been humorously said, that some have fished the very jakes for papers left there by men of wit. Swift.
2. With caprice; with whim.
HUMOROUSNESS. n. f. [from humorous.] Fickleness; capricious levity.
HUMORSOME. adj. [from humour.]
1. Peevish; petulant.
2. Odd; humorous.
Our science cannot be much improved by masquerades, where the wit of both sexes is altogeth'er taken up in continuing singular and humorsome disguises. Swift.
HUMORSOMELY. adv. [from humorsome.] Peevishly; petulantly.
HUMOUR. n. f. [from humor, French; humor, Latin.]
1. Moisture.
The aqueous humour of the eye will not freeze, which is very admirable, seeing it hath the periplicity and fluidity of common water. Ray on the Creation.
2. The different kind of moisture in man's body, reckoned by the old physicians to be phlegm, blood, choler, and melancholy, which, as they predominated, were supposed to determine the temper of mind.
Believe not these suggestions, which proceed
From anguish of the mind and humours black,
That mingle with thy fancy. Milton's Agonistes.
3. General turn or temper of mind.
As there is no humour, to which impudent poverty cannot make itself serviceable; so were there enow of those of deperate ambition, who would build their houses upon others ruin. Sidney, b. ii.
There came with her a young lord, led hither with the humour of youth, which ever thinks that good whole goodness he sees not. Sidney.
King James, as he was a prince of great judgment, so he was a prince of a marvellous pleasant humour: as he was going through Lufen by Greenwich, he asked what town it was; they said Lufen. He asked, a good while after, what town is this we are now in? They said still it was Lufen: said the king, I will be king of Lufen. Bacon's Apophthegms.
Examine how your humour is inclin'd,
And which the ruling passion of your mind. Roscommon.
They, who were acquainted with him, know his humour to be such, that he would never constrain himself. Lryden.
In cases where it is necessary to make examples, it is the humour of the multitude to forget the crime, and to remember the punishment. Addison's Freeholder.
Good humour only teaches charms to last,
Still makes new conquests, and maintains the past. Pope.
4. Present disposition.
It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves, that take their humours for a warrant To break into the blood-house of life. Shakep. K. John.
Another thought her nobler humour fed. Fairfax, b. ii.
Their humours are not to be won,
But when they are impos'd upon. Hudibras, p. iii.
Tempt not his heavy hand;
But one submissive word which you let fall,
Will make him in good humour with us all. Dryden.
5. Grotesque imagery; jocularly; merriment.
6. Diseas'd or morbid disposition.
He was a man frank and generous; when well, denied himself nothing that he had a mind to eat or drink, which gave him a body full of humours, and made his fits of the gout frequent and violent. Temple.
7. Petulance; peevishness.
Is my friend all perfection, all virtue and discretion? Has he not humours to be endured, as well as kindnesses to be enjoyed? South's Sermons.
8. A trick; a practice.
I like not the humour of lying: he hath wronged me in some humours: I should have born the humour'd letter to her.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
9. Caprice; whim; predominant inclination.
In private, men are more bold in their own humours; and in comfort, men are more obnoxious to others humours; therefore it is good to take both. Bacon's Essays.
To HUMOUR. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To gratify; to soothe by compliance.
If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men;
if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow. Shakep.
If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. Shakep. Julius Caesar.
Obedience
